

ABSTRACT OF THE INVENTION

A method for producing a composite image that includes a first and second image. The second image embeds information in the first image in a manner that the second image will change in appearance when the first and second images are scanned or photocopied.